Q: How to have a unified picture size for all browsers in an App Engine application? Is there a way to have a picture uploaded and displayed in an App Engine application have the same resolution regardless of the browser and client resolution? I'd like to avoid a strategy of having the image resolution scaled up on a larger device (like a large retina display on a phone), and just leave it at the one size that is appropriate for all devices. A: There is no client-side JavaScript that will make this work in all situations. You can use a server-side framework like Varnish or mod_pagespeed to cache the image on the server, and the response headers will include the correct dimensions.

Prevention and treatment of complications following tongue surgery: an update. The management of complications following tongue surgery is discussed. Cases are selected to illustrate the potential complications and possible preventive measures and treatments. Complications following tongue surgery can be prevented by meticulous pre-operative planning, meticulous operative technique and post-operative management of the patient. A medical and dental team can best plan and coordinate treatment for the patient. Outcome can be enhanced by modifying the surgical approach to improve surgical exposure, a selectivity of dissection of tissue, and through the use of proper intraoperative surgical instrumentation and imbibing fluids and anti-inflammatory medications before, during and after surgery.

G-protein coupled receptors (GPCRs) are proteins with multiple domains: an extracellular N-terminal domain, a single membrane-spanning domain, an intracellular C-terminal region and a C-terminal domain after removal of the peptide hormone (termed the G-protein binding domain, GPCBD). GPCRs are sensitive to the extracellular environment, and they interact with numerous ligands, such as peptides, proteins, lipids and nucleotides. GPCRs are the targets of about 30% of clinically used drugs, and they are involved in a wide range of functions in the human body, such as, for example, sensing and initiating appropriate responses to chemical stimuli, nerve impulses and hormones, increasing or decreasing blood pressure, depression of the immune system, inflammation, regulation of the sex hormones, signaling for reproduction, prevention of cardiovascular diseases, obesity, feeding, regulation of blood glucose, secretion of saliva and tears, digestion, vision, pigmentation, bacterial infection and regulation of oxygen absorption. Q: change the directory in python How to change my current working directory in python? Q: Page title in PDF output is not showing in browser in Codeigniter I am using Codeigniter PDF library which I have successfully used for many projects. The issue that I am having is that in a particular PDF I need the title of the page to be displayed in the browser and it currently is not. Here is the part of my config.php file : `$config['pdf_title_page'] = "Page title";` I have also tried `$config['pdf_title_page'] = "Page title"; $config['pdf_title_page'] = ""; $config['pdf_title_page'] = 'Page title'; $config['pdf_title_page'] = ''; $config['pdf_title_page'] = 'Page title';` And nothing worked. I have also tried to change the page title field and had no success. If I use any of the following, they do display in the browser, but not as page title : `$config['pdf_title_page'] = array(0 => 'Page title'); $config['pdf_title_page'] = array('0' => "Page title"); $config['pdf_title_page'] = array("0" => "Page title");` With which combination of the above I can have the page title display correctly? A: From the CI PDF class documentation: To print a header title, set the PDF title page using `$this->config->item('pdf_title_page')`. The value can be an array of page number and text to display. So you should be able to do: `$this->config->item('pdf_title_`
